EXCHANGE STUDENTS ARRIVE

Hungarians Here Sunday

More than 30,000 Hungarians died in the fight for freedom last year according to the communists themselves. More than 100,000 other Hungarians, who took part in that grim struggle, succeeded in reaching sanctuary in the west. Included in that group were 314 members of the staff and student body of Sopron University.

This Sunday, those students will be at Central Station, one stop on the "freedom train" taking them to their new home in British Columbia, where they will resume studies in forestry at UBC.

ENTHUSIASTIC WELCOME

Here in Montreal, as at other stops on the trains route, Canadian students will be called upon to welcome these new Canadians in the most enthusiastic possible fashion. Sir George Williams, the U. of M. and McGill students are expected to form the bulk of the crowd. The train will arrive at 10 a.m. Sunday morning from St. Johns and will be met by, in addition to the students, a band supplied free by the American Federation of Musicians (James C. Petrillo, president).

Accept Federal Grants

Yesterday every major Quebec newspaper heralded Duplessis' "generous" grant to universities. The French papers were especially vocal in their praise—the French colleges received $10,677,300. McGill received $2,276,400.

Today we were shocked to learn that McGill's total included $1,000,000 of the $1,500,000 that Duplessis had promised to the McGill Building Fund. Of the increased provincial grants to universities of $5,063,133 McGill received a total increase of $100,000 for operating expenses and professors' salaries.

A study of the grants to French speaking universities indicates that although they received extremely large sums of money for capital expenditure they too only received token increases for operating costs.

The Duplessis plan to bring all higher education, both English and French, under his thumb becomes increasingly clear. Give the universities money to construct new buildings but don't give them any money to operate them. Thus when the time comes to handle the increased enrolment the university will have the space but not the means to use this space. Public pressure, Mr. Duplessis hopes, will then force the universities to come begging at his doorstep. Mr. Duplessis will then generously grant large sums of money in return for complete subservience. All Quebec universities will be in his hands.

The B. N. A. Act guaranteed to French Canadians a separate education in order to preserve their ethnic and cultural heritage. Education in this sense applies only to the public and high schools. We strongly support the principle that the French should have a separate primary education.

A university however must assume that its members are already educated — that they come to university to further their knowledge, to seek the truth, regardless of whose toes are stepped on. McGill is not a provincial university. Many of its students and faculty come from outside the province. McGill is not even a Canadian university for one out of every five students live in a foreign country. Mr. Duplessis, a university to deserve the name, must be autonomous, autonomous of Ottawa and autonomous of Quebec.

We feel it is the duty of every Quebec university to accept federal grants if for no other reason than to demonstrate they are free. Otherwise they must give up claim to the title "university" and become mere trade schools whose express purpose is to turn out civil servants for use in the province of Quebec.

Getting Together

Today an art exhibition sponsored by the University of Montreal and by McGill will be opened by His Excellency the Governor General at the Fine Arts Museum. It comprises the work of thirty five Canadian painters, and the show is being run entirely by students of the two universities. On Saturday there will be a seminar with student representatives from all parts of Eastern Canada, based on the theme of interprovincial exchanges of paintings. All this represents a commendable achievement.

One problem that is always with us is that of U. of M. — McGill relations. There has been too little contact between the two universities. Last year the Haute Ecole des Etudes Commerciales sponsored a very successful art exhibition to which they invited the SEC and other McGill students. It appears that in the field of culture at least, we have something in common with our colleagues over the mountain. If we complain about the language barrier between French and English Canadians, this excuse will hardly be considered adequate when the vast amount of planning and preparation that must have gone into the current exhibition at the Fine Arts Museum is considered.

The idea of the seminar extends the principle beyond the limits of the city. French and English universities will be represented, with the hope that the idea may catch on throughout Canada. Here is a real concrete attempt to lay the foundations of a truly Canadian culture. It is through projects like these, far removed from the strife of provincial politics, that French and English can get together, meet and talk, and come to some sort of mutual understanding. And never before in Canada was such understanding needed.

Politics and You

The question of where the university student fits into politics is one that has never assumed great proportions in Canada. In nineteenth century Britain there was almost a tradition that the Oxford and Cambridge Unions should act as the incubators for the politicians of the future. Then it was taken for granted by reason of the social status of the students that they should provide the bulk of the country's rulers — they were politicians by hereditary right almost. Now of course the situation has changed, but the number of "old school ties" among the leading figures of all the political parties in Britain indicates the importance that is still attached to a university education. The theory now is that the best brains go to university, and among the best brains are liable to be some who will end up in politics, either because they like it, or because they feel they should put their abilities at the disposal of the country.

In Canada, the politically conscious student has a hard time of it on many campuses. At McGill especially the student body seems more or less totally disinterested in politics. Each political club has a nucleus of about a dozen staunch believers, all of whom try to interest their friends in their particular political outlook. Within this inner core — and this holds for all the political clubs at McGill — there is a firm belief in a set of principals, and in courses of political action. Every one of the nucleus is a firm believer, no matter how their opponents may question their political outlook. There is keen rivalry, without malice attached, that shows up in the model parliaments. At every model parliament, a serious tone, moderated by good humor on all sides of the benches, has been in evidence. Speakers have been heckled, jeered, attacked, but there has been throughout it all an absence of ill-will, and a willingness to listen, if not to accept, other political viewpoints. Perhaps if we were a little more malicious, a little more vindictive, a little more ferocious in our political dealings at the university level, we might arouse more interest.

EXAMPLE AT TORONTO

But how much success do model parliaments have? They are attended by very few. The turnout at the Open House Model Parliament was about half that for the debate on the relative merits of Drexley and Poetry. The same faces and the same speakers appear at every Model Parliament. There are two arguments against student participation in politics. One is that they are not interested, the other is that they are not competent. The first would seem to be the most valid one, from the example of McGill. At some universities, however, notably at Toronto, there is a great interest in political parties. A debate on Marxism held at McGill, an evening debate, was crowded out, and the evening was like an old time election meeting — full of people bobbing up, applause and jeers. If politics can be made interesting, there is no doubt that the students will become interested in politics.

CONTRAST WITH BRITAIN

That the student is not trained or competent in anything is the common cry of those who fear his possible participation in political activities. Many students at McGill and other universities have taken part in national and provincial elections, acting as campaign managers, speaking at meetings, canvassing for votes. However here again the contrast between British and Canadian universities comes out strongly. On every university campus in Britain there is a group of what can be termed "hardened party men". These men have made up their mind to go in for politics, and take every chance that comes along to get familiar with organization, methods, and the whole machinery of the political set-up, on a local and a national level. They are encouraged by the professional politicians, and some students while still at college, have contested parliamentary seats.

ATTITUDE GENERAL

The lack of interest in politics on the campuses of various universities in Canada is a reflection of the lack of interest in politics in Canada generally. There are few great issues to divide the parties, the country is rich and prosperous, things are going fine, we don't have to bother, let someone else run the country. This attitude will only look after the present; the future must be looked after now. Here is where the real need to get the student interested in politics at the university level is shown. Not only as future electors, but also as future leaders, and possibly parliamentarians, the students have a greater responsibility to the country than any other section. In every possible way a live, responsible attitude towards politics should be encouraged among the student body.

Governor-General Massey To Get Exhibit Underway

Almost a year of close co-operation between the two major universities in Montreal culminates this afternoon when Governor-General Massey officially opens an exhibit of "Thirty Five Painters of Today". The exhibit is the first of its kind in Canada and represents a conscious attempt by the students of Canadian Universities to show their concern with the development of a national culture and with the growth of the arts in Canada.

The exhibition features the works of the top thirty five painters from the Province of Quebec as selected by a panel of the top art critics in the country. The press representatives who have seen the works on display have hailed the exhibit as one of the finest to be shown at the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts in many years.

FAMOUS ARTISTS

The entire list of artists may be seen on Pages 5 and 6 of this issue of the DAILY. It includes such well known figures in the world of art as Marian Scott, Stanley Cosgrove, Jean-Paul Riopelle and John Fox.

The exhibition is under the direction of a joint committee of the U of Montreal and McGill. Gyde Shepherd of McGill and Reini Mayrand (Montreal) are the chairmen while other members of the executive from McGill include Gail Gunning, Charles Stuart, Gordon

Wasserman, Jim Brierly and Jean Guy.

PRESS INTERESTED

The city press, radio and TV have shown a great deal of interest in the exhibition which will be open to the public for a period of three weeks from this Saturday to February 3 in the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts on Sherbrooke St.

A feature of the exhibition is a seminar on the future of Canadian Art which will be held tomorrow afternoon in the Merrice Room of the Gallery. Representatives of seven universities will take part in the discussion which is to be led by Alan Jarvis, Director of the National Gallery in Ottawa.

U Of M Joins McGill In Spirited Welcome

by Marv GOLDENBERG

The ancient rivalry between McGill and the U of M was revived for a short while last night in great jesting spirit as each tried to outdo the other in their welcome to visiting universities. McGill was awaiting the arrival of thirty-five students from Laval University and the U of M was waiting for a similar number of students from the University of Toronto. Seeing that both trains were late the only thing that the welcomers could do to keep warm was to shout and outcheer each other.

HOAXL

One of the great hoaxes for which the U of M are so famous was again pulled last night. While McGillians were on their toes ready to shout their great welcome, in walked a great cluster of college students. McGill cheered and cheered only to find out a few minutes later that these students were from the U of M and not Laval.

RED AND GOLD

At long last the Quebec train arrived. Off came the Rouge et Or from Laval carrying a great banner which read, Laval En Fin De Semaine, and singing and jumping and hugging their hosts. Most were also very glad to get in a few French words with Les Carabins from the U of M who helped in the welcome.

The spirit was carried to the Union where the guests were registered and treated to coffee and doughnuts.

ATTEND LECTURES

This same spirit will be seen all over the campus today and tomorrow. All the Rouge et Or, which are comprised of nearly equal numbers of males and females said that they are very anxious to meet McGill students. All these visitors will be wearing red and gold identification badges. They will be attending lectures this morning and touring the campus.

The detailed program for this weekend visit is found somewhere in today's paper. All students are invited to most of the events both to listen and to actively participate. The Exchange Committee hopes that many students will do so in order that everyone may benefit from this exchange.

There are still about fifty-up 1956 Annuals waiting to be picked up. Will the subscribers please come in and get them while we still have them.

Student Conference, Aid Fund Main Topics At SEC Meeting

by Liz GILLESPIE

Last night the SEC approved in principle the idea of holding an international student conference at McGill some time next fall. The suggested topic was the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. The conference would be patterned along the lines of the yearly Texas A & M and West Point gatherings. It would be the first such event to be held at a Canadian university.

Delegates would be invited from each of the ten provinces as well as from all the major American universities. The proposed conference would run from a Tuesday night until a Saturday night. It would begin with a keynote address on NATO and would include small discussion groups on various aspects of the subject. Each group would have an adult chairman and an expert on the subject who would supply facts when asked.

PROSPECT PUBLICATIONS

Publications connected with the project would include a preliminary brochure on McGill and the conference to be sent to the invited universities and a booklet containing final reports.

At present Wil Southam and Tim

Porteous are looking into the technical details of holding such a gathering. When they report back to the council a more concrete plan will be drawn up.

DANCE TO DODMAN AT HOCKEY FLING

The first Hockey Dance of the season, to be sponsored by the McGill Students' Union and the Arts and Science Undergraduate Society, will be held this evening in the Union Ballroom, following the hockey game between the University of Montreal and the McGill Redmen.

Mike Dodman and the "Holy Rollers" will supply continuous dancing music from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. The dance will not be limitted to McGill students. From over the mountain comes word that the University of Montreal is planning to send a contingent of over one thousand fans to cheer the Carabins.

Tickets can be obtained at the door at 75 cents each for those who don't attend the hockey game. However, those who attend the game will be charged only 50 cents each, provided hockey ticket stubs are shown as proof.

Student Revolts Arise In Russia

Berlin, Jan. 17 — (UP) — The West Berlin Newspaper "Telegraf" said today that student revolts had exploded in almost all large cities of Russia.

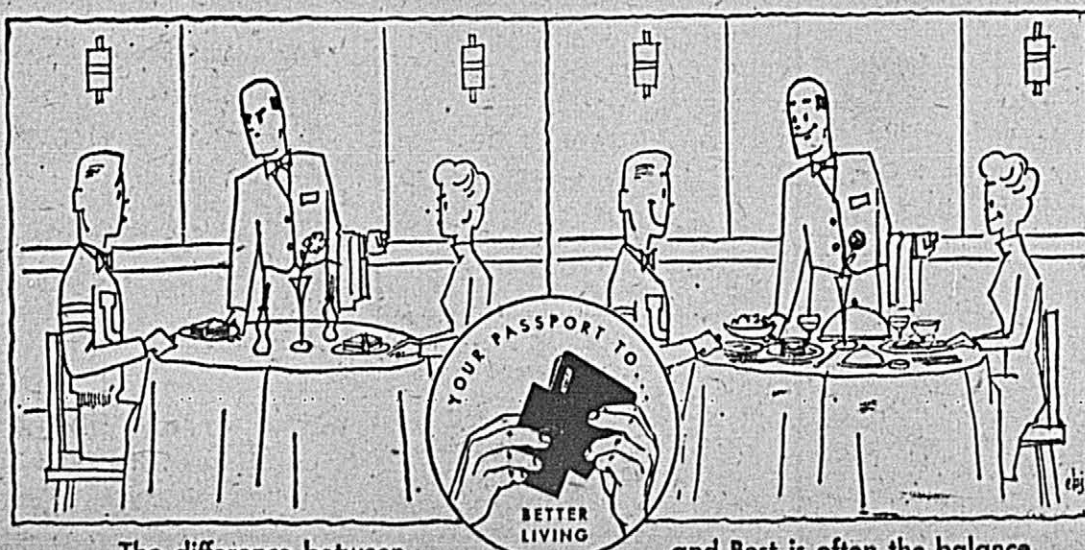

Red army tanks were needed to crush a ukrainian nationalist demonstration started by students in Kiev, it reported.

Other demonstrations occurred in Moscow, Stalingrad, Tiflis, Leningrad and Riga, the newspaper said. Two professors and more than 50 students were arrested in Stalingrad, it said.

Hungarian refugees carried the reports to Vienna, the newspaper said.

An article in the soviet magazine "Literary Gazette" admitted unrest in the Ukraine, "Telegraf" said. The article attacked "Debased Ukrainian nationalists who together with Hungarian and other fascists wish to destroy the unity of the soviet family of nations."

University Spons

first of its kind

In the Spring of last year, the Universities of Montreal and McGill decided to co-sponsor an exhibit of Quebec painters. Considerable time and effort exerted by committees in both schools has resulted in an exhibition of thirty-five Quebec painters. The exhibition, opening today at the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts, will run until February 4th.

The exhibition is the first of its kind to be organized in Canada, and will, the students hope, be followed by similar exhibitions throughout the country. By exchanges between the various universities, it is felt that their regional presentations will eventually reach every province.

COOPERATION

Montreal's two universities have seldom had much an opportunity for working together. Approaches have been made throughout the year for closer co-operation but (and this was emphasized by a member of the joint-committee), it appears that art is the best medium through which this objective can be accomplished. The problem of language appears, in fact, to have been the least of difficulties confronting the two universities. Financed by student funds, the exhibition has aroused the interest and encouragement of artists and students alike.

The thirty-five painters exhibiting were chosen from a list of over three hundred that was drawn up by the joint Montreal-McGill committee during the summer after prolonged enquiry from art galleries, museums and art critics. The choice of painters was made difficult not only by the enormous numbers of artists available, but by the high standard and perceptive quality of so many painters. "No doubt there will be criticisms of our choice," said a committee member, "but that is unavoidable. We chose those artists who appealed to us; not everyone will agree".

DOMINION GALLERY

"Canada's reputation in the arts, both at home and abroad, is based mainly on her painting. All those who came before us recognized the importance of Canadian painting both as an art and as an expression of Canadianism."

Report of the Royal Commission On National Development In The Arts, Letters And Sciences, 1949-1951 (Massey Report).

Among those represented will be Jean Dallaire, who was born in Hull, Quebec, in 1916. He won a Province of Quebec scholarship in 1938, and went to Paris where in 1945, he held a highly successful one-man show. At the present, he works for the national film board and at the same time, continues to produce paintings of a sur-

Jean Paul Riopelle, who also will be, exhibited, studied under Borduas, and became almost, overnight, a non-figurative painter. He now lives in Paris, and recently received the honour of having one of his paintings accepted by the Tate Gallery in London. He worked first as an engineer and later as an interior decorator; this possibly accounts for his excellent draftsmanship noticeable in most of his non-representational works.

Mr. Pellán was born in Quebec in 1906, and studied in Montreal before spending two years in Paris on a Provincial Scholarship. He has exhibited in many art centres of the world, including London, Paris and New York. Mr. Pellán now lives in Montreal.

Marian Scott was born in Montreal in 1906, and studied in this city and in London. She has had one-man shows in Kingston and Boston, and has exhibited paintings in Toronto, the New York World's Fair and Sao-Paulo. Mrs. Scott now lives in Montreal.

The list of artists is extremely representative, and will appeal to all those interested in painting. Many of the artists have already held one-man shows in Montreal. Other painters, although known in Quebec, have not as yet gained the wide reputation which they will surely enjoy.

A student spokesman had the following to say about the coming exhibit, "We feel that the interest shown by Montreal university students in this showing will be taken up by other student groups across Canada, as an example of youth's participation in the cultural activities of the country."

SEMINAR

In connection with the exhibition, a seminar dealing with the future of Canadian art will be held on Saturday, January 19th at the Museum. Representatives from six Universities will meet, among them delegates from Mount Allison, McMaster, Toronto, U of M, McGill and Laval. Mr. Alan Jarvis, Director of the National Gallery will act as chairman and address the gathering on the role of students in the development of art in Canada.

Josef Iliu was born in 1914. He first studied painting in his native country (Roumania). "Grand Prix de Rome" in 1942, he studied in Italy. He was first a landscape painter but now is a non-figurative painter who likes better the equilibrium of the forms and colours than the subject itself. He lives in Montreal.

U. de M. Meet Redmen Tonight

Redmen Shoot For Second Place

BY IRWIN SANKOFF

Visitors in their own rink. That's the role which the McGill Redmen will play tonight when they take on the University of Montreal Carabins at the MWS at 8 o'clock.

This odd situation is brought about by the fact that the Carabins have rented the Winter Stadium for all of their home contests this year and tonight's game happens to be one of those games.

In the other Intercollegiate game tonight, the Toronto Varsity Blues play host to the Rouge et Or of Laval. Toronto are presently in first place with a clean record of three wins while Laval are in the cellar having lost one game on the ice and two in the committee room.

The Redmen and Carabins have been the benefactors as a result of the two games which Laval lost by protest and in tonight's game the Redmen will be out to gain a share of the runner-up spot in the league standings. This will be the first meeting between the two Montreal rivals this season.

Last year the Carabins, who ended up tied with McGill for third place in the collegiate circuit, took three out of four games with the Redmen.

The Carabins are led by their star defenceman Gerard 'Butch' Houle and goalie Cy Guevremont. Guevremont is one of the better goalers to come into the Intercollegiate league in quite a while and the Red and White sharpshooters will have their work cut out for them tonight trying to beat him.

Also back for another whirl with the blue and gold will be Gaby Alain. Alain is the leading Carabin marksman at present having tallied three times. Two other forwards of note who will be skating with the Maplewood boys are Chick Duhaime and Pierre Renaud. Duhaime was the Carabins leading scorer last winter compiling 17 points on six goals and 11 assists.

At the other end of the rink the Redmen will have Michel Joyal between the pipes. Michel put on a great display during the Redmen's exhibition tour in the States and seems to be the possible answer to the Redmen's goaling worries.

Both Jimmy Grant and Len Sigurdson are doubtful starters on the Redmen blueline corps. Grant is not in perfect condition yet as he is still recuperating from a football leg injury. Sigurdson has not been out to practice due to pressure of studies, but he will be a welcome addition to the Redmen lineup.

Doug 'Tiger' Maule, Don McDonald and Bruce Smith will be the other members of Joyal's defence.

Leo 'the Cannon' Konyk just back from ski school up north will be patrolling his usual left wing post with Ross 'the Sniper' Hughes on the right side of the 'old smoothie', centre Dick Baltzan.

Captain Jack McMullan will centre Phil Turcotte and Jack Geneux on another attacking unit while Keith Lawes, Warren 'King' Allmand, Des Senior and Eldon Horsman will be the remaining forwards.

Lawes may not see too much action as he has aggravated a back injury which he obtained during the football season. Nevertheless coach Rocky Robillard hopes to get some action out of the rookie centre.

McMullan will probably be the new point man on the Redmen powerplay. Robillard has used Jack on the blueline quite a bit in recent exhibition play and may move him to the point position tonight.

All scramble no goal. There's always plenty of action around the goalmouth when the Redmen of Old McGill tangle with their crosstown rivals, the University of Montreal Carabins. Here's a shot taken in one of last year's games played between the two teams at the Forum. Cy Guevremont has come well out of his nets to smother a rolling puck. All-star defencemen 'Butch' Houle (2) stands guard while several McGill plays poke away in an effort to retrieve the puck. The Redmen and Carabins renew their rivalry tonight when the Carabins are host to the Red and White at the McGill Winter Stadium. Game is slated for 8 o'clock.

REDMEN TO MEET NYAC IN WATER POLO TILT

One of the features of Athletics Night which will be held this Saturday at the Sir Arthur Currie Memorial Gym will be a water polo game between the McGill Redmen and the New York Athletic Club. This will be the second game of a two game home and home total point series. The first game was played in New York, with McGill coming out at the wrong end of a 14-4 score. However, it must be realized that the New York Athletic Club is one of the top American teams having placed second in the United States Water Polo Championships.

The Redmen are the present Intercollegiate water polo champions, having defeated Toronto Varsity earlier in the year 31-16 in a home and home series. McGill has in fact won the title and the Herschorn trophy three years in succession.

The McGill team will be at full strength for the game Saturday, although Coach Barry Thompson is contemplating one line-up changes: with John Chabrel returning to the nets. Otherwise the line-up will be the same one which won the intercollegiate title.

Coach Thompson is looking for a good game from Bernie Toperowski, a first string forward, Charlie Evelyn who hails from the West Indies and who was one of the members of the Barbados International Water Polo Team, and Robbie Cook another forward who has been with the Redmen for several years... Robbie represented Bermuda in the 1952 Olympics.

The New York Athletic Club has among its members two Olympic stars, Jimmy McLane who also represented his club at the Pan American Games held in Mexico last year, and Frank Moorman and Ed Jaworski who were members of the 1952 American team. McLane was also the 1952 American swimming champion, and will represent his Club in the swim meet to be held immediately preceding the game, which will be held at 8:30 p.m.

After the sporting events there will be dancing to midnight.

Boxing To Be Featured

On Saturday night the McGill Boxing team will meet what should be an excellent team from Dartmouth University. In all, nine bouts are scheduled. The lineup is as follows: 135 lbs. Brian Cowan (McGill) vs. Mike MacKenzie; 140 lbs. Dave Marsh (McGill) vs. Pete Marshel; 150 lbs. Denny Repole (McGill) vs. Blackie Bruner; 155 lbs. Doug Terryberry (McGill) vs. Steve Ducker; 165 lbs. Don Kramer (McGill) vs. Bob Belinger; 165 lbs. Pierre Raymond (McGill) vs. Bill Peplack; 175 lbs. Chris Gilbert (McGill) vs. Jim Marlow; 175 lbs. Al Leach (McGill) vs. Pete

Miller; Heavyweights, Pete Arbour (McGill) vs. Herb Wahl.

On February 15 the Intercollegiate Boxing Championships will take place at McGill. It is hoped that Herman Kennedy, former Intercollegiate and Golden Gloves champion will be able to fight for the Red and White as he would be a great help to the team. Bill Briggs, Ozzie Downs, and Johnny Fawcett have not shown up to any workouts yet, but coach Bert Light thinks that they could help the team considerably if they were in shape by the time the championships come around. The final team has not yet been chosen.

Cagers Play Mustangs In Second League Tilt

BY IRWIN FISH

Coach Joe Anderson's senior cagers hope to pull the upset of the year this Saturday night at the Currie gym, by defeating the Western Mustangs, who have won the Intercollegiate Basketball Championship for the last twelve years in succession.

The highly touted Mustangs will once again feature height, strength, and speed. Ray Monnot, last years leading scorer, is back in the Western fold. Ray, who is six feet six inches tall, and John Girvin, a six foot five inch giant, give the Metrasmen plenty of height.

Smeeton, Scratch, and Knetchnel, are three veterans who are expected to give the defending champions plenty of speed.

Western have lost two first string forwards, Ellis and Veres. Ellis, it will be remembered, scored 25 points against McGill in one game last year. Jonny Metras has replaced them with Ralph Smith and Brian Matte, two new six foot-four inch forwards.

IMPROVED

The Redmen are described as one of the most improved clubs in the Intercollegiate League this year. The two most important additions to the team are Justin 'Red' Cross and Larry Scheider.

Cross has added much needed height (seventy-seven inches of it) to the team and has proven to be an excellent partner for Leon Duplessis around the basket. Last game he potted 30 points.

Scheider, in the opinion of Joe

Anderson, is the best passer on the squad. Once he gets his shooting eye he should be a real threat.

Don Wright, the Redmen's driving guard, hopes to equal or better his scoring feat in the McMaster game in which he scored 29 points.

Finny Heffernan, "the team's steadiest player" and "Dupe" Duplessis round out the first string squad. Ozzie Zommers, though still bothered with his knee, has shown well in practice and he is expected to see plenty of action. Leary and Finch will add depth to the Redmen team.

In their three games thus far, Western has not looked as powerful as last year, but they are still heavily favoured to cop Saturday's tilt. McGill will have to shoot very well to beat those Mustangs. We have shown that we can do it. For example, last week we shot 42.5%," said Joe Anderson in an interview yesterday.

US Scientists Shatter Principle Of Physics

A long-standing principle of physics has been disproved, it has been announced by Columbia University. Nine men and one woman at the university have stated that their research has proved that the so-called "principle of parity" is untrue.

This latest scientific advance, it is claimed, is comparable to the theory of relativity in importance, and, has been called the most important advance in physics in ten years. It leads to a whole new set of explanations about the atom, the world, and the cosmos.

The principle of parity was used by physicists to explore the mystery of the atom. It enabled them to manipulate their equations to predict atomic behavior.

The parity principle told physicists what had been "obvious to common sense" for a long time: That phenomena of nature look the same whether observed directly or through a mirror, except that right and left are reversed.

That the principle may not be just right was noticed by Dr. T. D. Lee, 31, professor of physics at Columbia University, and Dr. C. N. Yang, 35, a professor at the Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton, N.J.

Their clue lay in a peculiar atomic particle, a so-called k-meson, which is torn loose from the heart of an atom by the pounding of a 2,300,000,000 volt flying hydrogen atom. The theory—based on the parity principle—predicted that the k-meson would disintegrate in one way. It actually broke up in two ways.

Drs. Lee and Yang took a bold step and suggested that the principle was wrong. They also point out two direct experiments by which the principle could be tested. Within a few months both trials were under way.

At the National Bureau of Standards, Dr. Ernest Ambler, Dr. R. W. Hayward, Dr. D. D. Hoppes, Dr. R. O. Hudson, and Dr. C. S. Wu, the woman, cooled down radioactive cobalt-60 to a temperature of .01 degrees above absolute zero and applied a magnetic field to the spinning atoms.

Prediction Wrong

The parity principle would predict that the cobalt, being radioactive, would fire out electrons helter-skelter, but the measurements showed that the electrons came out mostly in one direction.

The other test involved the disintegration of pi-mesons into mu-mesons and neutrino particles.

The mu-meson disintegrates into an electron and two neutrinos in about two-millionths of a second. Again the parity principle says the electrons should come out in a scatter, but they came straight out from the flying mu-meson like a rocket blast from a rocket ship.

Panel Discusses Ghandi

The India-Canada Association, formed for the purpose of promoting mutual understanding and goodwill, will meet to commemorate India Republic Day and to pay tribute to Mahatma Ghandi, whose memorial falls on January 30.

This regular monthly meeting will take place in the form of a symposium on Saturday evening, January 19, at 8 p.m. in the Redpath Museum.

The subject for discussion is "The significance of the Indian Republic and Ghandi in the world today." The four panelists taking part are: Professor Aileen Ross of the Department of Sociology at McGill, Mr. Pierre Laplante of the Research Department of the Conseil des Oeuvres who, both, will represent Canada. Indian participants will be Dr. P.N. Kataria of the Montreal General Hospital and

Dr. S.P. Sinha of the Royal Victoria Hospital.

This meeting, which will be honoured by the presence of Mr. O.P. Khosla, press attaché, office of the High Commissioner for India in Canada, is open to the public.
